The ballroom was appropriately decorated with corn stalks and chinese lanterns, with amber colored crepe paper hung in artistic form over the ceiling lights causing them to cast a pleasing glow of colored rays over the dancing surface. Two nicely arranged cozy corners came at the south end of the hall came in for considerable attention and a fortune teller in a booth opening off the west side of the hall was kept busy throughout the evening telling of good things to befall her patrons.

cony was arranged as a Chinese re freshment parlor. Here Mexican chili was served and for those prefering cold refreshments, ice cream cake was served in a prettily decorated bower adjoining the dance hall. The most attractive decorations, however, were not stationary, but flitted joyously about the hall in the different dances. These were the young co-eds, who costumed in various charming fashion, created a maze of color. More than a hundred girls and a few of the boys entered into the full spirit of the occasion by appearing in costume and while, with the former, domino clown suits were
